

HELLO There!

I hope you find this literacy workbook helpful in this time where every public and private school student has been thrust into the homeschool world!

As a Literacy Collaborative Coordinator and a homeschool mom of 6 years, I know both worlds very well.

I've put together some of my best literacy writing work that is most suitable for a homeschool setting.

Use the daily guide as a guide. It's okay if your routine looks a bit different. Remember, the big goal in the next few weeks is to help students maintain their literacy skills, not necessarily to try and teach them a ton of new things.

If some of the work is too difficult for the student to complete independently, it is okay to sit down together and work through the page. We want students to feel successful and not frustrated.

Included in This Workbook:

1. 3 weeks of reading comprehension and writing work.
2. Writing activities to maintain writing stamina at home
3. 3 weeks of phonics practice
4. 3 weeks of direct vocabulary practice
5. A daily scheduling guide for at-home learning
6. Answer Keys
7. Google Classroom Digital Version

None of our families talked about where we would meet if there was a fire. And we never practiced a fire drill at home! We all got to try on the big, bulky, heavy fire jackets. We learned never to hide during a fire, but to find the safest escape. Mrs. Smith was right when she told us to take this field trip serious. We did have a lot more to learn about fire safety. My friends and I all promised to go home and make a fire safety plan with our parents.

Uno Rage

“Uno!” Camar shouted. We looked at him nervously and counted our cards. Would we be able to get rid of them in time? It was my turn next. I had to play either a blue card or a nine. My eyes quickly searched my cards. No blues, no nines.

“Come on, Nancy, let’s go!” Gadi whined. I had to draw a card. My hands were sweating. I picked up my new card and it was a blue five!

“Finally!” Gadi remarked. He eyed Camar. We were probably wondering the same thing. Did Camar have another blue? The answer would make Gadi’s choice easier, but there was no way to know. Gadi finally selected a card from his hand and laid it down quickly. The card made a THWACK as it hit the pile. It was a green five.

“Please don’t have a green. Please don’t have a green,” I whispered. But as soon as I saw Camar’s grin, I knew luck was not on my side. He played his final card—a green seven. Gadi raged.

“Hey, it’s just a game,” I said, trying to calm him.

“You put up a good fight,” Camar added. Gadi seemed to calm down a bit. Then he said,

“Want to go again?!”

The Snowman

Airyana blinked her blue eyes a few times, then continued to stare at her writing notebook. The straight blue lines made her eyes go out of focus. The white background was blinding. She looked up and stared out the frosted window of her classroom.

“Why is this so hard?” she muttered to herself. She was supposed to be writing a poem, but she had no idea what to write about. She squinted to see what was outside. Maybe something would inspire her. Airyana noticed a snowman on the school yard. Some kids must have made him during recess.

“How cute,” Airyana whispered. The rest of the class was quietly scribbling away in their notebooks. She hoped it wasn’t obvious that she was the only one without a creative idea to write about. Airyana used her sweatshirt sleeve to wipe away some of the frost from the window. She took a better look at the snowman and gasped. Did that stick arm just move? It looked like the snowman had waved at Airyana!

“But that’s not possible,” she said. Then she thought for a minute. “Or is it?” Airyana quickly bent over her notebook, pencil in hand. She finally had an idea she could write about.

The Brave Mathematician

The numbers danced across the whiteboard. Mouamong stared at them with a confused look. Why did three times four make twelve? Where did Mrs.

Mock get the one and the two from? "This doesn't make any sense," he mumbled to himself. He quickly looked back down at his paper, hoping no one heard him. He didn't want people to know that he was completely lost.

"Are there any questions?" Mrs. Mock asked. Her eyes searched the room, but Mouamong avoided Mrs. Mock's gaze. The seconds started to feel like hours. Mouamong was afraid to ask for help. He didn't want to look dumb.

"Maybe I should ask for help. Maybe Mrs. Mock would re-explain it. I don't want everyone else to be annoyed with me, but how else will I learn it?"

Mouamong took a deep breath, swallowed, and raised his hand, "Could you go over that again?" Mouamong's face turned red, then he heard someone across the room,

"Yeah, I think I need to see it again too." It was Chadu. Mouamong was surprised that someone else was also struggling!

"I'd love to!" Mrs. Mock replied. The class breathed a sigh of relief, and Mouamong realized that maybe he was not alone in his confusion.

Name: _____ Date: _____

Koalas

Have you ever seen pictures of those cute cuddly looking bears from Australia? The funny thing is they are not bears at all. They are marsupials. Marsupials are mammals that grow up in their mother's pouch. Koalas look fuzzy and have gray or brown fur. Their fur repels water, so they don't get wet when it rains.

Their paws have long sharp claws. Each paw has five digits like our five fingers. They use their paws for gripping and climbing trees. A koala's sense of smell helps them find the right leaves to eat. Their noses are important to them.

Koalas stay awake all night, which makes them nocturnal. Since they are so active at night they tend to sleep or rest for 18-20 hours a day. Nighttime works better for the koalas because it can be very hot during the day. When koalas are awake they are either grooming, eating or interacting with other koalas.

Koalas talk to each other. They do not speak like humans do; instead, they use different sounds that can be heard from far away. Mothers and babies make soft clicking and squeaking sounds. Koalas make a screaming sound when they are scared.

Koalas are cute, interesting creatures that are fun to learn about.

Wildfires

Wildfires can be a scary thing. We have seen them in California and also in Australia. Wildfires are fires that burn out of control in a natural area. They can spread quickly and are hard to control. They will damage anything in their path such as homes and natural resources. They can threaten the safety of firefighters and people who are in the area.

Most wildfires are caused by humans. They can also happen because of natural causes. One way humans can cause wildfires is by not putting out their campfires completely. Another way humans can cause wildfires is by playing with matches or fireworks. Natural causes of wildfires can be because of lightning, dry weather, or volcanic eruptions.

There are several effects of wildfires. The soil in the area can be destroyed along with its nutrients, so things will not grow as well. Another effect is that animals are harmed or can lose their lives. Ash, and smoke that are released into the air can cause air pollution or health issues in humans. Trees and plants are destroyed in wildfires and this hurts humans and animals. Trees provide oxygen and help keep the air clean. Wildfires are very serious. Everyone needs to avoid being the cause of a wildfire.

Brotherly Love

He carefully shut his locker door and turned to walk to class with his friends. Tyree saw three boys standing near his younger brother’s locker. The boys were laughing and bothering the things inside Jaden’s locker.

“Stop it!” Jaden firmly stated to the boys. “Knock it off!”

“What is this?” one of the boys mockingly asked as he handed a photo from his locker to another boy.

Tyree closely watched the boys as he continued to walk to class with his friends. These boys regularly bothered his brother. He was not going to allow it any longer. Tyree could clearly see the boys taunting his brother as he walked closer. Sometimes he and Jaden would argue at home, but he didn’t want someone else to pick on his brother.

“Give it back,” Jaden shyly ordered.

“He asked for the photo back. Give it to him,” Tyree sternly said to the boys while glaring at them. He stood beside his brother.

“We don’t want any trouble, Tyree,” one of the boys quickly said and handed the photo to Jaden.

“I never want to see you around my brother again,”

Tyree sharply directed.

The boys rarely crossed Tyree. He was widely respected in the school. The group angrily turned and walked on.

“You’ll never have to worry about them again,” Tyree proudly said to his brother.

The Family Next Door

Neither my dad nor my mom agree with me, but I think the family that just moved next door must be from outer space. They cannot possibly be from our planet because everything they do is so strange.

Mom said I should not watch them from the window, but I can't help it. They play games in the backyard that look like a mix of baseball and croquet. Mom said it is a game called Cricket, and it is typically played in Europe. I'm not sure why they can't play the same games I do. I would really like a friend that could play catch outside with me.

Yesterday, they had a couple visitors stop by. They greeted everyone not only with a hug but with a kiss on each cheek. This didn't seem to bother anyone. The only time I am greeted with a kiss on the cheek is when my grandma comes over. She always gives me a huge hug, and then smooches each of my cheeks. Yuck! I can't imagine what kind of people they are.

DING DONG! The door bell rang.

"Julian, can you answer the door?" Mom yelled.

I quickly ran to the door and opened it up. My eyes saw the boy from next door. I smiled, for he was holding a baseball and a glove.

Number 23

One of the most widely recognized names in basketball is Michael Jordan, but he wasn't always the famous NBA basketball player who wore number 23 out on the court.

Michael Jordan grew up wanting to play basketball. He would regularly follow his older brothers to the park, and he would learn from them and their friends. When he was not playing with his brothers, he would practice his skills on his own hoop at home.

MJ, the nickname people called him, didn't have the height he needed to play basketball. His mother convinced Michael that in order to grow he needed to shake a little salt in his shoes, have patience, and a little faith. Michael did exactly what his mother told him because he believed her.

Michael finally had the chance to tryout for his high school basketball team. He had grown quite a bit, but he wasn't as tall as the other boys. He didn't play as well as them either, so the coach cut him. He didn't make the team.

Although these setbacks frustrated him, Michael Jordan continued to work hard. Eventually his efforts paid off because his name and talent are widely recognized in the NBA.

Homework Dilemma

Jackson swung his backpack to the floor. “Phew! That was a long day,” he said to his mom.

“Oh really? Well it isn’t over yet. Where’s your homework?” Jackson’s mom asked, as she shuffled through the day’s mail.

“Aw! I thought you’d forget to ask. I guess I’ll get it out of my bag.” Jackson leaned over to unzip his bag, but as soon as he opened it, he gasped. “Oh no!”

“What’s wrong?” his mom asked.

“I left my reading notebook at school,” Jackson answered, his eyes wide.

His mind started racing. What was he going to do? He knew Mr. Richie would not be happy if he showed up tomorrow without his reading homework done. He was supposed to read his chapter book and then write a summary of what he read. After thinking for a minute, Jackson exclaimed, “Aha! I know what to do!”

The next morning, Jackson proudly gave Mr. Richie his reading homework—written on the back of an envelope. “Look! I forgot my notebook, but I still got it done! That’s dedication right?!” Jackson said eagerly.

“Huh! Very resourceful, Jackson!” Mr. Richie smiled.

Randy’s Dream

“Write one page about what you want to be when you grow up.” Randy read the directions for his homework assignment again. It was due on Monday. “Ugh! What am I going to do?” Randy whined.

“Cool! That’s a fun assignment. What do you want to be when you grow up?” his older sister, Raina, asked. Randy didn’t want to answer. The truth was, he knew exactly what he wanted to be when he grew up. He just didn’t know if he wanted to share it with other people.

Randy’s dream was to be a dancer. His parents had taken him to a musical at the theater and Randy had loved watching the dancers leap and twirl. When the show was over, he stood up clapping and yelling, “Bravo!”

He could imagine himself up on a stage, dancing and spinning, and the audience calling out, “Ooh! Aah!” as he braved moves no dancer had tried before. It would be so thrilling!

Randy looked up at his sister. Would she make fun of him? He gulped and said, “I want to be a dancer.” Raina’s face lit up.

“Awesome! You would be an amazing dancer,” she said as she walked away. Phew! Randy thought. He felt relieved and decided he could finally start his homework.

Count to Three

Today is an important soccer game for my team. We are playing the best team in the league, the Mountain Lions Team. My team is a great team and we have worked hard this year. My friend Alicia is a fantastic goalie and of course Mr. Gonzalez is the best coach. We are all very excited to play. However, I am a little worried about my friend Jorge. He has a bit of a temper. I am hoping he can keep it together because he is a really awesome player.

The game began and it was very tough. Our team was playing as hard as we could. That's when it happened. The biggest kid on the Mountain Lions team was about to shoot a goal when Jorge went to block and tripped. The Mountain Lions made the goal. Jorge got up and was so mad I could see his face turning red. He started yelling and screaming. I knew if he didn't stop he was going to get kicked out of the game.

Coach called time out and I went out on the field to try and get Jorge to follow me off the field. I brought him to the sidelines and I told him to count to three. He looked at me and asked me why. I told him if you count to three you can calm down and feel better. He said he would try it. He did it and told me he felt better. I told him next time just stop and count to three.

Margaret Thatcher

Margaret Thatcher was the first woman prime minister of Great Britain. She was often called the “Iron Lady” because she believed in being a strong leader. She was prime minister for 12 years. A prime minister is someone that is the leader of a government.

Margaret Thatcher was born on October 13, 1925 in a small town in eastern England. She had just one sister. Her family worked at a grocery store. They lived above the store in an apartment. When she was ten years old she helped her dad with a town election. He was a member of the town’s council (a group of people who come together to make decisions). He shared his knowledge with Margaret. Her inspiration for becoming prime minister was her dad.

Margaret had always worked hard in her life. She had a job as a chemist, she became a lawyer, and held many jobs in the government. Finally in May of 1979 she was elected prime minister, so her hard work had paid off. She found that her job of prime minister was difficult, but she continued to work hard for her government and her country. She was a strong woman that many people look up to today. She died in April of 2013, and she had a grand funeral that even the Queen of England attended.

Wild Words

I have something important to say. I can feel my words running through my busy mind. My silent words are trapped inside. Those unspoken words want to blurt out loudly, but my teacher expects me to raise my hand.

My teacher is kind and patient, but she insists that I keep by loud words to myself. She swiftly reminds me to quietly raise a silent hand when I speak out loudly without permission. Although she wants to hear what I say, she tells me I have to wait for my turn.

My loud mouth shouts and talks whenever it pleases, and it gets me into big trouble. I try to control my words, but those talkative lips say whatever they wish. The thoughts busily swirl inside my head like a wild tornado fighting to get out. The words quickly creep inside my mouth and thrust themselves out into the class.

My kind and gentle teacher wants me to think before I speak. After I silently think, I can raise a quiet hand. She wants me to make sure I hold my hand still because sometimes my hand is like my mouth. It is silly and waves wildly while I wait.

I know I can follow the normal expectation. I can tame my noisy mouth and my enthusiastic hand.

Man's Best Friend

Dogs have been called man's best friend for centuries, but today dogs are more than a friend. They are dependable. Dogs are training and certifying to become service dogs and therapy dogs. Service dogs and therapy dogs help humans in unique situations.

Dogs can have jobs just like humans. Their loving personalities make them perfect working companions. Therapy dogs go with their owners into homes, schools, nursing homes and hospitals. These dogs provide love to sick patients and individuals who need extra attention.

While some may think therapy dogs and service dogs are the same, many will argue that they are not. Service dogs include guide dogs. These animals are working for a blind person as their guide. The service dog tends to the blind person and leads him or her safely through daily routines. Service dogs, like therapy dogs, must train and certify before working with an individual.

Ben's Big Problem

Ben was pretty much your typical ten-year-old boy. He tried hard in school, made friends easily, and listened to his parents. The one crucial problem that Ben had was he would always procrastinate. It didn't matter if he had two weeks to complete a project, Ben wouldn't even begin it until the night before. If he needed something for school, he'd tell his mom at the last minute. Ben's procrastination caused his mom to be very anxious, but Ben never seemed bothered. That was until the one time his bad habit caught up to him and he missed an important deadline. Ben forgot to have his mom sign the permission slip for a field trip to a waterpark that the whole school was going to, to celebrate the end of the year. He only discovered his error when he walked into school and saw everyone with their permission slips in their hands. Ben asked to call his mom and sprinted to the school office. But, his mom didn't answer her phone. He called his dad. Still, no answer. Ben became hysterical. He had no choice but to stay behind in the office while all his friends crammed on the busses to the waterpark. That day Ben ceased being a procrastinator. He learned his lesson.

I Have a Twin?

"Hi Grace!" a voice repeated over and over behind me in line at the grocery store.

"Grace?" I felt a tap on my shoulder. I turned to see a stranger who stared at me, embarrassed. "Oh, I'm sorry," she said. "You're not Grace. You have a twin that looks just like you!" "Don't worry," I laughed, "I get that all the time." I'm used to people telling me I have a twin. I live in a small town and people assume they know everyone. In fact, I've been called Grace before. I wonder what this girl named Grace looks like. Did she really look so similar to me? I like to fantasize about what it must be like to have a twin, but I just shrugged and followed my mom to the car. That night I dreamed about Grace and pictured how she looked. In my dream Grace had a contagious laugh, just like me. A few weeks later, something remarkable happened at the park. I overheard a laugh coming from the slide that sounded just like me. When the girl popped her head up, it felt like I was looking in the mirror. "Grace?" I whispered. The girl's head spun around, "yes?" It was the Grace! We immediately became best friends, and it felt like from that day forward I really did have a twin!

Too Much To Do

Blake was one of those kids that was great at everything. His artwork was always the best in class, he could play the guitar, make friends in a second, score perfect 100's on every test, and was the best basketball player on his team. With all Blake's talent, many people would consider him to be really lucky. But that wasn't the case for Blake. He was completely overwhelmed. His days were full of so many expectations to be perfect. He would wake up worrying about picking the most trendy outfit. Blake would smile through the school day, but he wasn't really happy at all. Right after school he went to basketball practice, then off to music lessons, and a night full of homework. Blake was so overworked he never got a break. He managed this insane schedule until one day he snapped. Blake woke up and something inside of him told him to just quit. He didn't want to get out of bed. He was tired of trying to make everyone happy and being perfect. Blake's mom was startled when he didn't come down for breakfast. She found him still under the covers, refusing to move. Blake confessed to his mom how stressed out he has been and that he couldn't take it anymore. Together they made a plan that focused on helping Blake be truly happy.

Adjectives

Directions: An adjective is a word that describes a noun or a pronoun. Writers use adjectives to add to details to a text. Adjectives are often found right before the word they are describing. There can be more than one adjective in a sentence. Read the passage and answer the questions. Then take the challenge!

Man's Best Friend

Dogs have been called man's best friend for centuries, but today dogs are more than a friend. They are dependable. Dogs are training and certifying to become service dogs and therapy dogs. Service dogs and therapy dogs help humans in unique situations.

Dogs can have jobs just like humans. Their loving personalities make them perfect working companions. Therapy dogs go with their owners into homes, schools, nursing homes and hospitals. These dogs provide love to sick patients and individuals who need extra attention.

While some may think therapy dogs and service dogs are the same, many will argue that they are not. Service dogs include guide dogs. These animals are working for a blind person as their guide. The service dog tends to the blind person and leads him or her safely through daily routines. Service dogs, like therapy dogs, must train and certify before working with an individual.

Dogs have provided lasting relationships with humans in many cultures for a long time, but they are finding more responsibilities in modern days. Dogs continue to be best friends, close companions, and hard workers.

Write About It: In your own words, tell the most important parts of the text. Circle the adjectives in your answer.
